Sub: System improvement regarding proper record-keeping for major changes in works/proposal in construction projects.

- (1) In construction projects, initial survey is usually conducted by an external agency such as RITES and proposals are made regarding construction of stations, bridges (type, span, location, etc.), tunnels (lengths, location, etc.), etc. In certain circumstances, these proposals are required to be changed prior to execution based upon techno-economical grounds. Several changes in the proposal/structure are also adopted during the execution stage due to the prevailing situations.
- (2) The deviations from the original proposal and changes before/during the execution by the competent authority have considerable financial impact on the overall cost of the project.
- (3) During investigation of a case, it has been observed that proper records/documents pertaining to even major changes in the proposal/work and corresponding techno-economical justifications are not maintained either by field unit or HQ/MLG. This creates inconsistency in decision making by different executives against same work/location.
- (4) In view of above, it is advised that proper records, including technical and financial justifications/views of the concerned competent authority, be maintained whenever change in proposal/scope of work is warranted due to prevailing circumstances. These records are crucial in effective decision making by the succeeding incumbents and helpful in timely completion of projects.
